

Awards*

First Team: $1500
Second Team: $1000
Third Team: $500

Global Business Students Competition 2020

NYIT School of Management invites business and engineering students to participate in this year's Global Business Students Competition to resolve the material handling challenges of ElringKlinger Silicon Valley Inc. of Fremont, California, USA. The company is seeking creative and efficient material handling systems to handle finished products inside its Fremont facility.

Student teams

- Each student participant should be a full-time student of a college or university in the academic year 2019–2020.
- Students from all the academic disciplines can participate (preferred academic fields are engineering and business and management).
- There is no limit for the number of students from an institution.
- Competition organizers will form diversified student teams.
- To participate, register on or before February 20, 2020 at nyit.edu/management/students_global_case_competition.
- The case will be sent to all the registered students before virtual Q&A session.

Important dates:

- Virtual questions & answers session:
Friday, February 27, 2020
(1–2 p.m., EST/10–11 a.m., PST)
- Preliminary student presentations:
Friday, April 24, 2020
- Final student presentations:
Friday, May 8, 2020

Questions? Contact

Birasnav Muthuraj, Ph.D.
Director of Experiential Education
NYIT School of Management
SoMExperiential@nyit.edu

*For New York Institute of Technology Students:
In order to receive this award, students should have 1) no open disciplinary charges and 2) "paid in full" balances on their student accounts (if not, award will be applied to outstanding balances). In addition, domestic students should have FAFSA on file with New York Institute of Technology; for international students, this award may be subject to tax.

*For Students Not Enrolled in New York Institute of Technology:
In order to receive this award, students should fill out W8/W9 form.
This award may be subject to tax.